The Tasks

1. Order the albums on the Artist's albums page (eg `/artist/1/albums`) in descending order based on release date.

(1) Done

2. Add a page listing all songs on an album (`/album/{albumId}/songs`). The songs must be ordered by track number.

(1) Done

3. Allow a user to add songs to their library.

(1) Done

4. Allow a user to add an album to their library (this will add all songs on the album to their library).

(1) Done

5. Allow a user to add an artist to their library (this will add all of the artist's songs to their library).

(1) Done

6. Add a page that allows a user to view all songs in their library (`/library`). The songs should show which album & artist they belong to.

(1) Done

7. Add a page showing all artists in the user's library (`/library/artists`). Each artist should be clickable to show all albums in the library for that artist.

(1) Done

8. Add a page showing all albums in the user's library (/library/albums). Each album should be clickable to show all songs in the library for that album. The album should display which artist the album belongs to.

(1) Done

9. Allow a user to 'love' a song.

(1) Done

10. Add page showing all loved songs in the users library (/library/loved).

(1) Done

The Good

- All Tasks have been completed
- Made full use of Laravel's Eloquent models and their relations
- Use of eager loading
- Use of the pivot for loved songs
- Created the album listings page even though it wasn't asked in the tasks
- Added validation to requests
- Added a solution for the missing track numbers into the seeder

The Bad

- Could have reused some of the views to prevent duplication
- Some of the library pages could have been reused
 - eg. Library > Artists > Albums could have just reused the Library > Albums controller but with an artist filter
- Add to library buttons still visible when in library
